INTRODUCTION

At this time promiscuity in adolescents is no stranger to us (Darnoto 2020). Accompanied by the development of increasingly advanced technology, all information can be obtained freely on the internet. Utilization of information technology obtained from internet media will be able to have a positive impact if used properly by the community, but will also have a negative impact when the internet is accessed to obtain bad information (Fitri, Rubiani, and Astuti 2018). One form of negative impact that is caused by the proliferation of promiscuity among teenagers is influenced by unhealthy mental attitudes, making many teenagers feel proud of the association which is actually an illegitimate association (Nadirah 2017). Because as we know that the internet has given us the freedom to find information in any form.

Posigadan High School students in Milangodaa Village, district Tomini distrik South Bolaang Mongondow, North Sulawesi Province, based on observations made by Gorontalo University students who were carrying out service work lectures, that many teenagers in the village were exposed to promiscuity. There are even some Posigadan I High School students who drop out of school because they are pregnant out of wedlock. From the condition of being pregnant out of wedlock to being a result of marriage at a young age, it also increases. This will have an impact on the health conditions of adolescents physically and mentally (Simanjuntak and Doloksaribu 2020). Pregnancy out of wedlock also causes the age of young marriage among the people of Milangodaa village to increase as well.

The purpose of this socialization is to provide education and knowledge about the dangers of promiscuity and the negative impact that this behavior can have. So it is hoped that with the understanding of promiscuity, teenagers, especially students and college students, can change their minds and improve all negative behaviors that have been carried out so far.

METHOD

This service is a socialization carried out during the implementation of the service work lecture by Gorontalo University students which was held on July 15, 2022 in the Posigadan I High School field, Milangodaa Village, Tomini District, South Bolaang Mongondow Regency, North Sulawesi Province. Beginning with a presentation about promiscuity and its impact then this activity was carried out with the lecture method, then continued with discussion and question and answer. This activity was attended by 50 students.
